FORWARD

This booklet with its accompanying material is based on Federal Civil Defense recommendations to aid all existing hospitals in organizing vitally needed immediate operational procedure for natural disasters and civil defense emergencies. Using it as a guide, specific hospital plans may be evolved by appropriate institutional authorities in each instance in order to meet their immediate individual requirements.

The recommendations contained herein are the result of studies of current figures; and therefore, are subject to modifications as new data is accumulated and cold in the rapidly changing field of civil defense. The accumulated and culled in the rapidly changing field of civil defense. The accompanying material, listed elsewhere in these pages, reproduced in quantity, is designed to assist in appraising existing facilities and personnel with a view towards streamlining procedures and expanding services to cope with the extraordinary demands of the disaster situation. It is presented in a looseleaf style for filing in standard hospital record folders to facilitate its maintenance as an up-to-date basis as to revisions, addition or deletions. As new or revised pages are distributed they should be inserted in the proper place and the replaced pages destroyed. The viewpoints expressed in these work are the private ones of the author, presented in the spirit of helpfulness, and not to be considered as official dictums of the National Military Establishment, the civil Defense Organization or other government agency.

I wish to personally thank very much Miss Lois Pemberton for her invaluable assistance, Miss Emma Viggiano for varityping and composition and Miss Ethel Pelzer for help in literary research. I also extend my grateful appreciation to Rear Admiral Charles Behrens (MC) U.S. Navy, Gerald Sinnott, M.D. and Mr. A.J. Anthony for constructive criticisms; Mr. John Zingaro and the Jersey City Medical Center Press for printing services; Miss Frances Eaman and Mr. Nunzi Zampella for cover design and execution and Hon. Lewis Hansen, for cooperation in the publication of this manuscript. Finally, I would be remiss if I did not express my profound regard for the host of hospital, nursing and medical personnel, professional and volunteer, without whose inspiration this work would have been impossible.
